Yacon, Smallanthus sonchifolia. Research has proven that is beneficial for those with hypertension. By thinning the blood Yacon can lower blood pressure by 5 to 10 percent. It can also lower cholesterol and discourage clot formation. Unfortunately, Yacon has a reputation for being a Diabetes but it is also excellent to reduce the hypertension problems.. Dr. H Brams said yacon roots themselves had not been proven to have the same palliative effect as the Yacon leaves. Even so, yacon is now popularly associated in Peru with diabetes, though other benefits such as its laxative quality and ability to help prevent colon cancer and osteoporosis are less well known. In a laboratory study using rats, it was found that the administration of a decoction of ten-percent yacon produced a significant decrease in plasma glucose levels. Also the administration of yacon tea ad libitum for 30 days produced a significant improvement in plasma glucose, plasma insulin levels, body weight, creatinine clearance, urinary albumin excretion on diabetic-prone rats as compared to the diabetic controls. A Japanese patent suggests the use of a blend of yacon leaves and leaves of oolong tea to control blood sugar level, high cholesterol level and body weight gain. A Japanese company released a product containing an extract of red rice and yacon for the control of hyperglycemia and lowering cholesterol and triglycerides (Monocolin, Maruzen Pharmaceuticals). Yacon has high concentration of fructooligosaccharides (FOS) which beneficial bacteria (probiotics) like Lactobacillus acidophilus, Lactobacillus

Maras Pink Salt
Model : 600 gr
600 grams of pure peruvian pink Maras Salt. From Wikipedia: Since pre-Inca times, salt has been obtained in Maras by evaporating salty water from a local subterranean stream. The highly salty water emerges at a spring, a natural outlet of the underground stream. The flow is directed into an intricate system of tiny channels constructed so that the water runs gradually down onto the several hundred ancient terraced ponds. Almost all the ponds are less than four meters square in area, and none exceeds thirty centimeters in depth. All are necessarily shaped into polygons with the flow of water carefully controlled and monitored by the "farmers". The altitude of the ponds slowly decreases, so that the water may flow through the myriad branches of the water-supply channels and be introduced slowly through a notch in one sidewall of each pond. The proper maintenance of the adjacent feeder channel, the side walls and the water-entry notch, the pond's bottom surface, the quantity of water, and the removal of accumulated salt deposits requires close cooperation among the community of users. It is agreed among local residents and pond "farmers" that the cooperative system was established during the time of the Incas, if not earlier. As water evaporates from the sun-warmed ponds, the water becomes supersaturated and salt precipitates as various size crystals onto the inner surfaces of a pond's earthen walls and on the pond's earthen floor. The pond's keeper then closes the water-feeder notch and allows the pond to go dry. Within a few days the keeper carefully scrapes the dry salt from the sides and bottom, puts it into a suitable vessel, reopens the water-supply notch, and carries away the salt. Color of the salt varies from white to a light reddish or brownish tan, depending on the skill of an individual "farmer". Some salt is sold at a gift store nearby. The salt mines traditionally have been available to any person wishing to harvest salt. Usually there are many unused salt pools available to be farmed. Any prospective salt farmer need only locate an empty currently unmaintained pond, consult with the local informal cooperative, learn how to keep a pond properly within the accepted communal system, and start working.

Peruvian Potato Chips
Model : Vlapapa
3 rare varieties of peruvian potato chips from Andean mountains (5 oz per bag): Anticucho BBQ is a flavor that needs little introduction to aficionados of Peruvian cooking. It is one of the most famous dishes in Peru, usually eaten in the wee hours of the morning from a smoky roadside charcoal grill. We have left out the meat and the charcoal (it weighs too&nbsp;much!) but kept a hint of smoke with tomato, onion, red peppers, garlic and a sprinkle of chillies. Mixed chillies & Lime packs a punch. There are plenty of hot chips around, some with the faintest trace of chilli and others that blast your head off. We use a smooth blend of bell peppers and red chilli adding a generous splash of lime. Spicy and tangy like the very best Peruvian dishes; best quaffed with an ice cold drink of your choice and ideally on a beach of your choice. Peruvian Pink Salt. Near Cusco at 2500 meters above sea level is a special place called Maras. For as long as local communities can recall, the salt pans of Maras have yielded a delicate salt with a pink tinge. Myths abound over the origin of the salty water that springs up but whatever the truth, Sal de Maras is high in Iron, Magnesium and Zinc which is jolly nice.
